How has the internet changed the way we access and value information?	The internet has transformed how we access information, making it faster and more convenient than ever. With just a few clicks, we can find answers to nearly any question, and the wealth of available content is constantly growing. However, this ease of access has led to a shift in how we value information. Quick, surface-level responses often take priority over in-depth, researched knowledge, and we tend to favor convenience over accuracy. As a result, while we can access an immense amount of information in seconds, the value of thoroughness and expert knowledge is sometimes overlooked, requiring us to be more critical of the sources we rely on.	100	150	0.6564956547	0.6	yes
How has the internet changed the way we access and value information?	The internet has fundamentally changed how we access and value information by making knowledge available to anyone with an internet connection. This has democratized information, breaking down barriers that once required specialized resources or institutional access. People now have the power to learn about any topic instantly, whether through articles, videos, or online courses. However, this shift has also changed how we value information—quantity often outweighs quality, and the vast amount of content available makes it harder to distinguish between reliable and unreliable sources. As we rely more on the internet for knowledge, we must become more discerning, thinking critically about the credibility of sources and the accuracy of the information we encounter. This new landscape encourages both greater access and greater caution.	100	150	0.7242624106	0.6	yes

How do social media platforms impact teenagers' mental health and relationships?	Social media platforms have a complex impact on teenagers' mental health, both positively and negatively. On one hand, they provide a space for self-expression, social connection, and support. Teens can find communities that share their interests, experiences, or struggles, which can foster a sense of belonging. However, the constant exposure to curated content often leads to unrealistic comparisons, heightening feelings of inadequacy and anxiety. The pressure to present a perfect image can affect self-esteem, leading to depression or body image issues. Additionally, the addictive nature of social media can disrupt sleep, contributing to mood swings and difficulty concentrating. The impact on relationships is also notable, as online interactions may replace face-to-face communication, leading to weaker social bonds or misunderstandings.	100	150	0.8836462746	0.6	yes
How do social media platforms impact teenagers' mental health and relationships?	Social media platforms can significantly affect teenagers' relationships and mental health by altering how they interact with peers. Online platforms can strengthen relationships by allowing teens to maintain contact and share experiences, especially with long-distance friends. However, they can also introduce problems such as cyberbullying, peer pressure, and social exclusion, which can have long-lasting emotional effects. Teens may feel more isolated as their real-world interactions diminish in favor of online ones, leading to issues like loneliness and anxiety. The constant need for validation through likes and comments can contribute to a cycle of comparison and low self-worth. If I could travel anywhere, I would go to?	If I could travel anywhere, I would go to India because I have never been there. I am from Punjab, India, but born and raised in Virginia. I want to go to India because I enjoy listening to Punjabi music and watching Indian movies. I also want to try authentic Indian food. I have heard that the taste of true Indian food is different. Additionally, I would like to see the Taj Mahal and Golden Temple. They are monuments that I don't get to see in America. Finally, I want to experience Diwali in India, the celebrations are extraordinary and I wish to see them in person. The fireworks and lights are spectacular and the outfits are exquisite.	100	150	0.557187752	0.6	no
The most interesting fact I ever learned from research was..	Schrodinger's thought experiment. In this thought experiment, a cat is put inside a closed box with a radioactive atom that might or might not kill it. What Schrodinger said was that as long as the cat is inside that box, it is simultaneously dead and alive. During the time it is in the box the cat exists in multiple states. The cat is dead and alive because nobody knows its true state until the box is opened. The thought experiment was fascinating because it made me think about how situations in real life exist in multiple states at one time. It encouraged me to be open to different possibilities and embrace uncertainty.	100	150	0.3485122819	0.6	no
In addition to my major, my academic interests include?	One of my favorite subjects is statistics. I love watching sports and statistics plays a huge role in sports. I did a project analyzing how salary cap money affected winning in the NBA, which made me realize that I love working with numbers. I am also captivated by world history. I am intrigued by how past leaders were able to influence their people. I like to compare this influence with how our leaders influence citizens today. Also, I enjoy that history is subjective and up for interpretation. In history there isn't always a right or wrong answer; it's more about the arguments one can make to justify their perspective.	100	150	0.5850743587	0.6	no

My favorite thing about last Friday was?	Last Friday my cousins from New Jersey came over. My favorite part of the day was when we wrote time capsule letters to each other that we will read in four years. Each of us wrote to the other three and we will keep those letters hidden until 2028. We also did this in 2020 and read those letters aloud in 2023. We all laughed at our past selves and our prognostications for who we would be in 2023, so we decided to do it again. I wrote about funny experiences we all had in the past as well as hopes I have for us in the future. Each letter is a memory that we cherish as a direct connection to each other and the past we share.	100	150	0.5964542974	0.6	no
Something you might not know about me is?	I had allergies to nuts and sesame seeds. They were very severe and caused allergic reactions. As a kid, I had two allergic reactions and both times I experienced anaphylaxis and hives. In 9th Grade, I started a treatment called NAET (Nambudripad's allergy elimination technique) along with acupuncture. This treatment is an alternate way to treat and possibly eliminate allergies. I was treated once a week for three years throughout high school and I can now eat nuts and sesame seeds. One of the moments that reflected how far I had come was when I went to London and was able to eat at the restaurants there without worrying about my allergies.	100	150	0.5455629135	0.6	no
Virginia Tech's motto is "Ut Prosim" which means 'That I May Serve'. Share how you contribute to a community that is important to you. How long have you been involved? What have you learned and how would you like to share that with others at Virginia Tech?	As a member of the National Honor Society and Key Club, one community I have contributed to is the hospitalized kids community. I have spent hours writing letters to children battling and recovering from illnesses in the hospital, providing a ray of positivity in their lives. I mail my letters and they reach children all across America. I have been doing this for 3 years. I have learned the power of perspective. When I write these letters I realize how tiny our concerns are compared to life threatening illnesses. I would like to share this mentality with people that complain about school. I want them to be grateful for the opportunities they have and not be too stressed about grades.	100	150	0.5692998907	0.6	no

Virginia Tech's Principles of Community supports access and inclusion by affirming the dignity and value of every person, respecting differences, promoting mutual understanding and open expression, and strives to eliminate bias and discrimination. Have you had an experience when you or someone you know were not being included? Did you reach out to anyone for assistance, direction, or resources? Were you able to affect change and/or influence others? Did this experience change your perspective and if so, how?	I used to play basketball during recess. I was always picked last. I was the only Indian kid so they had a preconceived notion that I wasn't good at basketball. Even when I played I was never passed the ball. This made me excluded and after a while I talked to my parents. They told me that I should focus on what I can control and not define myself based on other peoples actions. Although I wanted to play with the cool kids, I knew that they wouldn't change, so I got myself a basketball and started playing on a different court. This experience changed my perspective because I learned that I shouldn't get upset about things outside my control.	100	150	0.4322275766	0.6	no
Share a time when you were most proud of yourself either as a role model or when you displayed your leadership. What specific skills did you contribute to the experience? How did others rely on you for guidance? What did you learn about yourself during this time?	One time I was proud of myself as a leader was when I became a math tutor. The first skill I need is to understand the problem they ask me about, then I have to figure out how to communicate the process of solving the problem to the students so that they understand it effectively. It is paramount that I explain the concepts to students well because every student learns differently. These students rely on me to understand the concepts behind math problems, which should lead them to becoming successful in math. I learned that teaching is much harder than just understanding. Teaching requires me to communicate my understanding of the concepts effectively.	100	150	0.5314538265	0.6	no
Whats your favorite sport and why?	I love playing basketball. The way that the ball goes into the hoop and the swish sound make me very excited to play basketball. I play every day with my friends outside and we have a lot of fun. Whenever it gets really cold outside, we go to our high school and play over there. It's a great sport to learn teamwork and get a great workout in. Additionally, there are games like horse and knockout you can play. Horse involves someone taking a shot and then everyone else has to make it after them. Knockout is about getting the ball into the hoop before your opponent.	100	150	0.535412023	0.6	no

What's your favorite subject and why?	My favorite subject in school has to be math. I love using my hands and getting into the calculations of things. It's so much fun to do addition and subtraction or multiplication and division. I also enjoyed algebra and geometry a lot. They were definitely challenging, but I've always enjoyed a healthy challenge. Also, math is a subject with only one right answer, and that makes me feel really content and happy. I don't like subjects where interpretation is part of the right answer, I like concrete and facts. Additionally, I have always had really good math teachers and they have helped me do well in math year after year.	100	150	0.6173820999	0.6	yes
